This is the report of the Judicial Nominating Commission (“JNC”) made in accordance with Rhode Island General Laws § 8-16.1-4(b). Please note that pursuant to the aforementioned statute, applicants for judicial vacancies are not required to provide demographic information concerning their race, ethnicity and/or gender. In addition, the JNC is required to collect demographic information with respect to race, ethnicity and gender anonymously from applicants.

Because there is no requirement that applicants provide the requested information and because the data must be collected anonymously, very few applicants provide the requested information through the JNC’s Voluntary Supplement to the Personal Data Questionnaire. Thus, the information below reflects demographic information received from a small sample of the applicants for any given judicial vacancy, and it is biased in favor of those who voluntarily participated.

Providing demographic information should be voluntary on the part of applicants. However, the JNC would be able to provide more accurate demographic information about applicants for judicial vacancies if it were not required to collect the data anonymously.

Between January, 1 2022 and December 31, 2022, the JNC reports as follows:

1. The JNC made recommendations with respect to the following judicial vacancies:
 - A Rhode Island Superior Court vacancy created by the retirement of Associate Justice Susan E. McGuirl (Recommendations June 2022)
 - The JNC received responses to the Voluntary Supplement to the Personal Data Questionnaire from seven (7) of twenty (20) applicants, indicating that at least three (3) of the applicants identify as women and at least five (5) of the applicants identify as racially/ethnically diverse.
 - A Rhode Island Superior Court vacancy created by the retirement of Associate Justice Netti C. Vogel (Recommendations December 2022)
 - The JNC received responses to the Voluntary Supplement to the Personal Data Questionnaire from nine (9) of twenty-one (21) applicants, indicating that at least three (3) of the applicants identify as women and at least five (5) of the applicants identify as racially/ethnically diverse.
 - Rhode Island District Court vacancy created by the passage of law authorizing an additional judicial position (Recommendations December 2022)
 - The JNC received responses to the Voluntary Supplement to the Personal Data Questionnaire from nine (9) of thirty-four (34) applicants, indicating that at least three (3) of the applicants identify as women and at least four (4) of the applicants identify as racially/ethnically diverse.
 - A Rhode Island District Court vacancy created by the retirement of Associate Judge Elaine T. Bucci (Recommendations December 2022)
 - The JNC received responses to the Voluntary Supplement to the Personal Data Questionnaire from nine (9) of thirty-four (34) applicants, indicating that at least three (3) of the applicants identify as women and at least four (4) of the applicants identify as racially/ethnically diverse.

- Rhode Island District Court vacancy created by the retirement of Associate Judge Christine Jabour (Recommendations December 2022)
 - The JNC received responses to the Voluntary Supplement to the Personal Data Questionnaire from eleven (11) of thirty-eight (38) applicants, indicating that at least four (4) of the applicants identify as women and at least five (5) of the applicants identify as racially/ethnically diverse.

2. Efforts made by the JNC to encourage racial ethnic and gender diversity.

The JNC made efforts to encourage racial, ethnic and gender diversity during the period of this report. Specifically, I reached out as Chair to the Thurgood Marshall Law Society, the Rhode Island Women's Bar Association, and the Rhode Island Hispanic Bar Association to encourage applications by having Notices of Judicial Vacancies circulated to their members, in addition to having the notices posted in The Providence Journal, Rhode Island Lawyer's Weekly, the Rhode Island Bar Association, on Providence En Español's website and on the JNC's website.

Sincerely,

/s/ Krystle Tadesse
